No More Agitation.

The St. Louis Intelligencer, contains the following, which there is a vast deal of truth in and which we commend to those spirite, North and South, who are ever busily intent on surring up contention and strife between the two sections of the Union:

"We think we may safely assert that the late game of slavery agitation connected ath Kansas, is completely 'played out.'— morrow. hansas itself is in a political syncope, the 18 alt of those frightful spasms and convulsings which exhausted its strength and wasted its vigor. The South is weary of strife which has revealed the superior colonizing tapacities of the North, and which, if conpoued, would make all the remaining Terphories tree States. The North has become saisfied of the impracticability as well as of the injustice, of the doctrine of 'no more sare States,' and has wisely decided to let they will or will not have slaves.

But the chief reason for the cessation of are other subjects of more vital, practical importance to be agitated. The revision of the Tariff is a question of growing interest and moment; the exhauted condition of the Tressury is a matter that cannot be neglectall and the necessity, daily growing more the Pacific, is a subject that must attract at-gress, and so monopolize the time and talents our statesmen as to leave no leisure for melodramatic 'shrieks for freedom.'

W. H. Seward Repudiated.

In various quarters we perceive, the organe the republican party repudiating the Roelester abolition manifesto of W. H. Seward sutteriv impracticable for Presidential purposes. For example, the New Haven (Conn.) Journal and Courier, declares that:-

"He embarrasses the republican party when helinks its fortune with the abolition of slatery, "through the several States co-operating with the Federal government and acting in strict conformity with their respective consitutions." The party has never adopted ser such idea in its declaration of principles, sol a strong ground for its appeal to countersoce and support as a national party in the sareholding States, has always been that it surdily respected the rights of the States and designed in no way whatever to interfere with slavery in the States where it existed by virtue of local lawe; and it would suffer most seriously from any well grounded suspieron that it proposed a crusade againgt slatery and wherever wherever found."

The Pittsburg (Pa.) Press understands hat the proprietor of the New York Ledger, deeming the President's salary entirely disproportioned to his services, has made a proposition to double it for the remainder of the Presidential term, provided be will furnish his executive messages to the Ledger exclu-
